Mining stocks have not, in the past, been popular with investors or those The word investment in this article is used in the sense of speculative investment, for obviously the word in its strictest sense could not be used to include copper or other industrial stocks. Some authorities put under that head only the highest grade of bonds. Speculation: Operations wherein intelligent foresight is employed for the purpose of deriving a profit from price changes. No. 4 wishing to observe some conservatism in their speculative ventures for two very good reasons: --First, the relatively small number of prospects that have ever made good and, second, the everpresent possibility of resources becoming exhausted, resulting in a cessation of dividends and a total loss of principal. As far as the first of these reasons is concerned. it is to be regretted that the exploitation of wild cats has been responsible for a prejudice against securities representing so large and important a branch of our national activity as the mining industry, but no sympathy is due those who have lost money by buying, without investigation, mining shares touted by irresponsible mining sharks. Their cupidity overcame their judgment and in trying to get something for nothing, they were handed--just what you could reasonably...
