I believe New Albany has as fine berries as are sold in Chicago, except Barnesville, Ohio. I was told five years ago that they grow there in hills. An old Quaker started the method first. It is hill culture, and finally matted row. I concluded I would grow the same, as their soil is similar to ours. We have little stone, but it is a different soil from yours, Mr. Webster. My first single row culture was ten inches wide, and it was so far ahead of growing two and onehalf feet wide that I concluded I would still cut down, and they did well. I have run single rows for five years, but generally from three to four. I generally grow potatoes on my ground and follow with strawberries; I do not think it advisable to plant on sod, as the...
