We each had our dish and turned in for the night. Toward morning, So, my Korean friend, who slept next me, was up and down groaning as though in great distress. What s the matter? I inquired. I have an attack of summer complaint, said he. The day before we had walked ten miles through a fall of snow, and I could hardly understand how he could have an attack of summer complaint. Those oats, said he, have done it. Sleeping in a small Korean hut I found, at first, to be one of my hardest trials. In a tight room, eight by eight, by six, without one particle of ventilation, the floor heated nearly to the frying point, you spread your blanket. The inexperienced traveller, pursued by fiery dreams, baked almost brown, gasps for breath and wishes for the morning. But after a year or two of practice, one gets to like the hot floor, for as the natives say, it lets you out after a cold day s journey. The homes of the gentry (yangban) are usually very neat and attractive, the rooms well papered and clean; but the inns and huts in which we lodged on this northern trip were certainly far from comfortable. There is an oppressive odor common to a Korean room, that took me months to analyze. It seemed to prevail in large quantities everywhere. I found at last, that it was composed of...
