Createspace Independent Publishing Platform, United States, 2017. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand .Denis Hoppe shows how the tripping, musical language and sensuous beauty of Egyptian women led Tawfiq Al-Hakim to try to put the spoken Egyptian Language into his novels for the first time. He discusses, Hakim s Enchantment with women in Arab Egypt s history, and shows how Hakim uses the Arabic language in all the power of the colloquial to develop a love story of a crush a young boy had on his piano teacher into the novel that is said to have been Gamal Abdel Nasser s favorite, and is still permitted reading in the conservative Gulf states, who have always been opposed to Arab nationalism. Thus, Denis Hoppe s 1969 Senior thesis for the Bachelor of Arts at Princeton University is an essay in literary criticism of the novels of Tawfiq Al-Hakim, containing occasional quotations from Hakims s novels to show the reviewer s point of view--some in Arabic script and some in English script in the reviewer s translation. European (mainly British) critics, as well as Arab critics are cited from the Arabic equivalents of the Reader s Guide to Periodical literature; and the Arabic periodicals were easily available in the Princeton University Library, as they are in big-city libraries in the US. The style of this essay was common at the time when writing about literature in a foreign language often quoted whole pages directly in the original language, at the oppressed woman s housewife-secretary rate of 60 words a minute, typed on an IBM Selectric typewriter with it s interchangeable steel ball that typed the characters for full professors and text-book writers at the time. The reviewer, as a student, did not have the means...
