CAMP HAWTHORNE, WHERE IT ALL BEGAN

America Star Books, United States, 2013. Paperback. Book Condition: New. 216 x 140 mm. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand .One of life s paths that I was destined to travel was developed and nourished while at Camp Hawthorne. The other path was living in military schools, one of which was Manlius Military School in Manlius, New York. The latter path was highlighted in my previous novel Manlius Military School Adventures; however, the current story concerns itself with my life at Camp Hawthorne, an all-boys camp in Raymond, Maine. I spent my summers from the age of seven to eighteen at Camp Hawthorne. Each summer, I grew older, not only physically, but also mentally due to the camp s Harvard influence, courtesy of Major Bigelow. Camp Hawthorne was owned and directed by Major Bigelow, the head of Harvard University Medical Center s Department of Child Psychology. The camp was for the elites of the private educational systems of America and the world. Most of my foundation for later life was forged while attending Camp Hawthorne. My love of sailing, nature, and horses originated from my years at Camp Hawthorne, along with much of my understanding of girls, which I acquired from our association with Camp Minnehaha and the secret advice of the Harvard psychology intern students who were acting as counselors. If by nothing else, we learned by osmosis from our association with our counselors, as they did not realize how much we picked up from their own indiscretions. Between the counselors and the proximity of an all-girls camp, Camp Minnehaha, the younger boys learned a lot on this new subject. Once a week, the camps had coed parties for their older campers during the summer. I am quite sure the boys learned a lot from...
