Forgotten Books, 2017. Hardback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand . Excerpt from Young Abraham Lincoln and Log College Following Lincoln s lead, every early Lincoln biographer, with an occasional slip, rang all the changes on his lack of opportunities before going to Illinois; and, also, regarding his almost total lack of formal education when he arrived at New Salem, which occurred soon after he reached his majority. It is true that they told of his having been a voracious reader and relentless student in Indiana, and that he borrowed and read every book he could hear of for fifty miles around but the specific books mentioned were largely such as a child might find interesting, and the kind his unlettered associates would remember - Aesop s Fables, Pilgrim s Progress, a Life of Franklin, etc. But, within less than three years after Lincoln reached Illinois, Denton Offut had declared that Abraham knew more than any man in the United States, Lincoln had been elected Captain of his company in the Black Hawk War, had received 277 votes out of 284 in his own precinct for membership in the General Assembly of the State, and had attracted the favorable notice of the best educated and most influential men at Springfield. Soon after that, he was a competent surveyor, and had been elected over popular and cultured men to a seat in the legislature. After but a short service there, he became the leader of the Sangamon delegation and of his party in the State; was envied by his associates for his political acumen, his resourcefulness, and his genius for leadership.
