Reviews

Great electronic book and useful one. It can be written in straightforward terms rather than difficult to understand. Once you begin to read the book, it is extremely difficult to leave it before concluding.

This house was erected by Howard Heinz, son of the famous pickle manufacturer. He graduated at Yale 15 years ago. Mr. Heinz has taken a keen interest in boys club work ever since leaving college in 1900, and this noble building is the consummation of his endeavors. In connection with the dedication of the new club house Mr. Heinz issued a very attractive circular, telling about the club s work. This is here reprinted with Mr. Heinz s permission: The work which the Sarah Heinz House is undertaking to do today was begun 14 years ago by Howard Heinz just after his graduation from college. Like most enterprises that have in them the possibilities of practical development, it had an humble beginning. It was started as a local boys club in a small building on Progress street, North Side. It was felt there was need to supplement the work of the home, the school, and the church in providing for the boys leisure time; and that social and recreational activities under trained supervision could be made an effective training school for character, for enlightened citizenship and for the development of a spirit of co-operation in community improvement. With these ideas in mind, the work was launched in a very small...
