The rations brought by Major Brown arrived none too soon. They were the means of saving many lives. Almost the first man I saw after reaching the camp was my true and tried friend, Wild Bill. That night we had a jolly reunion around the campfires. When General Carr came up with his force, he took command of all the troops, as he was the senior officer. When a good camp had been selected he unloaded his wagons and sent them back to Fort Lyon for supplies. He then picked out five hundred of the best men and horses, and, taking his pack-train with him, started south for the Canadian River. The remainder of the troops were left at the supply camp. I was ordered to accompany the expedition bound for the Canadian River. We struck the south fork of this stream at a point a few miles above the old adobe walls that were once a fort. Here Kit Carson had had a big Indian fight. We were now within twelve miles of a new supply depot called Fort Evans, established for the Third Cavalry and Evanss expedition from New Mexico. The scouts who brought this information reported also that they expected the arrival of a bull-train from New Mexico with a large quantity of beer for the soldiers. Wild Bill and I determined to lay for this beer. That very evening it came along, and the beer destined for the soldiers at Fort Evans never reached...
