Excerpt from Report of Conference on a Minimum Wage: Held at the Guildhall, London, on October 24th, 25th, 26th, 1906 The Exhibition of Sweated Industries which the Daily News organised in May, 1906, called attention in a vivid and forcible way to the question of Sweating. It was the common feeling of those who visited the Exhibition that the interest and indignation that it excited ought not to be allowed to pass away, but ought to be used as motive power for a constructive attack on Sweating. Consequently, it was resolved to form the anti-sweating League, and, taking inspiration from Australia and New Zealand, to work towards the setting up of machinery to deal with Sweating on lines of a Compulsory Minimum Wage in specified industries. The circular given below explains how the League, desiring to get this policy confirmed and adopted by the Trade Unions and other interested bodies, called a National Conference at the Guildhall for the discussion of Sweating and the Minimum Wage originally intended to occupy two days, the announcement of the Conference secured such public attention as to decide the Committee of the League to extend the sittings to a third day, and thus to make possible a fuller discussion of the papers submitted to the Conference.
