Solar energy is the fastest-growing source of clean energy for the home. Driven by a steady decline in the cost of solar energy over the past 10 years, solar panel sales have skyrocketed in the U.S. Today, almost 1,000,000 American homeowners reduce their carbon footprint and fight climate change with solar energy. Most of them are rewarded with significant savings on their home energy bills. Does that mean that you will save money by going solar today? The answer is - it depends! The primary determinants of whether you can save money with solar have been your state's solar policy and the solar energy alternative that you pick for your home. Most residential solar sales have taken place in those states that have embraced solar-friendly policies. And most solar homeowners have chosen solar systems that they can lease rather than buy, although that may change going forward. Solar energy companies have driven the rapid growth of the residential solar market by installing rooftop solar systems. But since those systems typically generate excess energy during the day (while not producing any energy at night), a means of capturing their excess energy has been needed. And battery storage systems are expensive and can eliminate your potential for solar savings. The solution to this storage problem is to let your power company use your excess solar energy to supply power to its other customers. In return, it provides you with energy credits, which you can draw on when the sun is not shining. In some states, however, how much you are credited for your solar energy has become a contentious issue. While many people think of those rooftop solar systems as the way...
