A decade later - in March 2010 - the Commission set a new strategic goal under the name 'Europe 2020'. Achieving a 'new economic policy coordination process' and again 'smart, sustainable and inclusive growth' are the aims of this strategy announced by the Commission in 2010 (European Commission 2010). It becomes obvious that realising these goals requires harmonious coordination of macroeconomic policies. Therefore, this essay explores the different structures and procedures in place to coordinate the macroeconomic policy in the European Union (EU). It will focus upon fiscal and monetary policy-making as well as the Broad Economic Policy Guidelines and the Stability and Growth pact against the background of current debates. Identifying gaps in the...
