By Meinel, Lina Arbash

Condition: New. Publisher/Verlag: VDM Verlag Dr. Müller | Computer-Aided Diagnostic System for Breast MRI Mass Classification | Recently, death from breast cancer has dropped significantly in the United States due to early detection and effective treatment. DCE-MRI has emerged as a promising technique for detecting, diagnosing, and staging breast cancer. Computer-aided detection systems have proven to be useful for evaluating the large number of images produced. The next logical step is to implement computer-aided diagnostic systems. This book describes the development of a computer-aided diagnostic (CAD) research system for investigating breast MRI masses. It shows that computerized algorithms are reliable, have the potential to reduce inter and intra-observer variations, radiologist workload, and facilitate image interpretation. With an ever growing number of images and expanding clinical applications, CAD systems might play an integral role in breast imaging. | Format: Paperback | Language/Sprache: english | 168 gr | 116 pp.
