Not illustrated. 1919 Excerpt: .have been organized which will do the usual work of the 8 grades in the elementary course and 2 years of highschool work. He says: These schools are generally known as intermediate agricultural schools. The courses of study are along the lines of agriculture for boys, and of domestic science and home making for the girls. Teachers of agriculture have been employed in these schools on the understanding that they do continuation work during the summer. The boys who are taking the agricultural course are under the direction of this teacher, but are employed in regular farm work during the summer vacation. Agriculture as nature study. Agriculture begins in the first grades as nature study. This is an effort to make the country interesting to the little children who live in it. It then advances to more practical farming. It seems to be a fact that, to most of us, what we see every day, what is associated with hard toil and the problems of making a living, does not present itself in a very attractive light. It has required, therefore, men and women of unusual imagination, leaders in country life, to show boys and girls the science and the poetry of the soil. To find these things, they are taken out into the garden, the orchard, the field, which they cultivate according to the instructions of the United States Department of Agriculture and the state agricultural colleges, and often under the supervision of county agents....
