Excerpt from The Thirty-Ninth Annual Report of the American Madura Mission, 1873 Regarding 1834 as the first year of labor in this mission, (for Father Spaulding came again in the middle of the year, introducing and leaving behind the brethren Hoisington and Todd), we are now called to report the work of the fortieth year of the missions history. Well may we exclaim, what bath god wrought I when we compare things as they were forty years ago, with the present with the churches and pastors and schools and institutions of learning, with the number of nominal Christians and the large body of communicants. Especially is this exclamation right and proper, when we call to mind the saying of the devoted Henry Martyn, viz: Truly if ever I see a Hindu a real believer in Jesus, I shall see something more nearly approaching to the resurrection of a dead body than anything I have yet seen, and if we also recollect the vivid description, by Macaulay, of the people of Bengal, which applies far too much to the Hindus generally, namely: Courage, independence,...
