A taxpayer generally is allowed to claim a deduction for the fair market value of the donated property at the time of the contribution. However, the amount of the deduction allowable for a taxable year with respect to charitable contribution may be reduced depending on the type of property contributed, the type of charitable organization to which the property is contributed, and the income of the taxpayer. Contributions made directly to a foreign organization are not deductible for Federal income tax purposes. However, charitable gifts directly made to a qualified domestic entity may be deductible even though the funds or property are turned over to a foreign organization, provided that the domestic entity exercises sufficient control and discretion over the donated property.
