This is a profound, philosophic but sensational and shocking tale of the arts and artists, those who grope in the dark and are finally driven to the wall . and those who make it. In this disquieting but profoundly philosophical novella, Linda, through an appalling tale of intense drama, follows four women artists, three photographers and a writer, as they struggle to achieve recognition in their chosen fields. Fame, eminence, immortality-these are the only goals that drive Anne Sinclair. But does Anne possess some astonishing talent hidden within her? Can she become a great painter, writer, composer, or dancer? Or is she ordinary, destined to be a nobody-her name and life obliterated by death. This appears to be Anne s destiny until an electrifying revelation strikes, a revelation unmasked by the populace and affirmed by three needy artists who wander into her life.
