Excerpt from Address on Vacating the Presidency of the Archaeological Society of Glasgow: Delivered at the Annual General Meeting 15th November, 1894 In my opening address I adverted to the vast domain of Archaeology, and the necessity, not only of individual students, but even of societies, confining themselves to such topics of investigation as lie closest to their hands. For ourselves, it is not requisite to go from home for material to examine; the field of research in Scotland alone is far from being exhausted, the country teems with relics of a forgotten past: place names, legends, prehistoric remains, early literature, family history, ancient buildings, castles, houses, churches, monuments, personal relics, legal and other documents - there they are in great profusion for whoever will take the trouble to enquire about them. It would be a work of much value, but of no small labour, to give a survey of all that has been done during the last two or three years to illustrate the antiquities of Scotland, by individuals and by the half-dozen and more Scottish antiquarian societies. There has been, I think, a broadening of the interest in the subject for some little time past. Besides works of great importance, such as the treatise on Domestic Architecture, the publications of the Historical Society, and of the Spalding Club, the Rhind lectures, editions of early travels, and the papers which have appeared in Societies transactions, there have been smaller books, specially dealing with the topography, the scenery and antiquities of particular places or districts, which, if not profound or exhaustive, but merely popular and amusing, still serve the all important purpose of keeping the popular mind in touch with the past,...
