Dover Publications Inc., United States, 2017. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book. Mr. Hoffmann s magisterial command of the vast Wright literature is matched by his gift for placing the architect in the broader cultural crosscurrents of his time . long a respected Wright authority, [he is in] the very forefront of his peers. --The New York Times Built in Springfield, Illinois, in 1902-04 for socialite Susan Lawrence Dana, the lavish home known as the Dana House was designed for extensive entertaining and for housing the owner s art collection. The house was the largest and most ornamental residence Frank Lloyd Wright had constructed up to that time. The lines, dynamic structure, decorative sculpture, and a thousand other felicities of this magnificent house are captured here in a handsome pictorial essay by noted architectural historian Donald Hoffmann. More than 160 rare photographs and line drawings--including interior and exterior views, plans, elevations, sketches, and studies--clearly document Wright s residential masterpiece. The informative and perceptive text discusses the history and background of the house; its site, plans, and construction; the elements and principles underlying its design, and many other aspects of the home s creation.
