Through three scenarios we identify this linkage of the two-dimensional aspect of fiscal decentralization system. In the context of revenue growth. horizontal competition between local governments tend to depress the equilibrium real rate. the Intergovernmental longitudinal competitive pressures tend to raise the equilibrium real rate of revenue growth path depends on the relative strength of the two. Since the mid-1990s. the government vertical fiscal revenue competition induced by the continuous improvement of the efficiency of tax collection. raise the real equilibrium rate of economic growth lead to many years of sustained revenue of over provincial level data to support this theory speculate. In the context of provincial governing county reform. counties and cities within the financial geospatial horizontal competition. vertical interaction within the financial power of space and administrative power space. The city scraping County or City with the county? Divergent views. it is difficult to distinguish. Zhejiang Province (typical financial provincial governing county) and Jiangsu Province (2007...
