By Martin Koenig

GRIN Verlag. Paperback. Condition: New. 28 pages. Dimensions: 8.0in. x 5.7in. x 0.1in. Seminar paper from the year 2008 in the subject Communications - Intercultural Communication, grade: 1, 0, European University Viadrina Frankfurt (Oder), course: Intercultural Management and Multicultural Societies, 15 entries in the bibliography, language: English, abstract: In times of progressing globalisation companies are continuing to orientate themselves more and more internationally. Mergers and acquisitions are for instance a possibility to expand their competencies through the cooperation with appropriate partners respectively to take-over another company, in this way ones position in the global competition will be further improved. That is why the number of mergers and acquisitions were permanently rising within the last few years. After a slow-down in 2001, the investment in other firms has started again from 2004 so that by 2006 the number of deals rose to almost 39.000. This evolution of world-wide merger and acquisition deals within the last years is represented in the following figure: . . . Referring to the M and A NOTE of the European Commission, the average value of cross-border deals especially has been consistently higher compared to domestic deals. This can be explained by the fact that about...
