Brand New Book  Print on Demand .Excerpt from History of St. Paul and Vicinity, Vol. 2: A Chronicle of Progress and a Narrative Account of the Industries, Institutions and People of the City, and Its Tributary Territory Few cities of a corresponding population are so well supplied with educational facilities as St. Paul. There are fifty-six public schools, including four new high schools. St. Paul has fifteen colleges; a large number of exceptionally successful Catholic day-boarding schools; nearly a score of schools divided among various Protestant denominations (principally Lutheran) and several Hebrew schools. There are many business and commercial colleges, and a goodly number of private schools ranging from kindergartens to college preparatory. The enrollment in the public schools is over 28,500 and in other schools about 12,000, constituting altogether nearly a fifth of the entire population. The University of Minnesota, one of the largest in the country, every year gaining in completeness of equipment, is situated just outside the city's border, and one department, the School of Agriculture, with its experiment farm, is within the city limits. The St. Paul Institute...
