Excerpt: .a connexion which must be dishonourable to him? And why should the unmerited misfortunes of Gleneldie entail dishonour on the pure hand of his daughter? This is only a coy subterfuge--Look at me, dear Jessie; look in my face, and see what a pleading look is there--Let him be happy. --- With me he could not be so. Were it possible, and were I certain that the alteration in his manner sprang not from a fickle disposition, why--why, then we would talk more about it, -- and now let us take our bonnets, and see what has become of the brig. Having walked down to the beach, they found that the fineness of the morning had drawn together rather a numerous assemblage, and these of the better class; to account for which, the reader must be reminded, that we have brought him to that...
