Excerpt from The Renowned History of Richard Whittington and His Cat Though the waggoner was so charitable as to let him walk by the side of the wagon for nothing, yet he took care not to know him when he came to town. In a little time the poor boy was almost starved to death for want of food. In this distress he asked charity of several people, and one of them bid him go work in the fields. That I will, said Whittington, with all my heart I will work for you, if you will permit me. The man immediately sent him to make hay but when the season was over, he was again in great distress.
