August 20, 1812, a Day of National Humiliation, Recommended by the President, at the Request The gospel breathes a benevolent, pacific spirit. It proclaims peace on earth, good will to men. Let its spirit be imbibed, and its precepts be obeyed, universally; then strife and contention, war and bloodshed would cease. Man would no longer be foe to man; nor be employed in spreading distress, and misery, and death among his fellow creatures. But the law of love would rule in every heart; the law of kindness be on every tongue; to save, not to destroy men, would be the grand pursuit. All would comply with the golden rule - Whatever ye would that men should do to you, do ye even so to them. Prosperity and peace would every where abound. We should have new heavens and a new earth. But, alas! what different scenes do we behold. What a sinful, wretched place is this earth? Among those, who are most highly favored with blessings and privileges, temporal and spiritual, is seen most awful wickedness; so that the language of the Prophet is very natural and pertinent: Oh that my head were waters, and mine eyes a fountain of tears, that I might weep day and night for the slain of the daughter of my people! Oh that I had in the wilderness a lodging place of way-taring men, that I might leave my people, and go from them! for they be all adulterers, an assembly of treacherous men. And they bend their tongues like their bow for lies; but they are not valiant...
