Brand New Book ***** Print on Demand *****.It is thought that the Pope in 467AD was Pope Hilarius who was thought to be in control of the Western Roman Empire, although it was actually ruled by the Emperor and controlled by various regional governors. The Pope would not gain the political power to grant lands and other comparable privileges until centuries later. Arthur was loyal to Rome and was a devout religious person, but he had the belief that original sin did not taint human nature and that mortal will is still capable of choosing good or evil without special divine aid, which many of his subjects considered heretical. It has been suggested that the character of King Arthur was based on one Lucius Artorius Castus, a career Roman soldier of the late 2nd century or early 3rd century. The person that Malory termed emperor may have been several Lucius who were Roman Emperors in the second and third centuries AD. He and his men fought against native Britons who are rebels against Roman rule, led by the mysterious Merlin. In fact, King Arthur is a legendary British King...
