Excerpt: . . . column not only is unnecessary, but that it provokes the very mistakes that it was provided to trace. This is a point that will be explained more fully later in this description. The foregoing brief summary of the special advantages we are deriving from our particular installation, logically brings us to a consideration of the mechanical equipment and the card design with which these results are obtained. II. MECHANICAL EQUIPMENT AND CARD DESIGN A. MECHANICAL EQUIPMENT 1. The machines employed by us for handling our Balance of Stores posting are the Burroughs Posting Machines, Style 676-C, costing approximately 1000 each. 2. In addition to the regular posting machines we employ a hand-operated Burroughs Listing Machine, Style 314, costing 275, to be used with each of the posting machines for the purpose of taking predetermined totals and cross footings. Note: While the experiments which Elliott-Fisher machine people are conducting with our style of card are not yet complete, I may state from the latest information I now have as to their progress, that I believe their machine could be employed with our card with only a slight and unimportant alteration of the copy. Each machine has its advantage. The advantage of the Burroughs is that it is more nearly automatic, in that it prints the results of all calculations, while the Elliott-Fisher merely indicates such results on a dial or counter for the operator to copy as in typewriting. The advantage of the Elliott-Fisher is...
