Createspace, United States, 2014. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand . From The Publishers Weekly, Volume 101, March 1922: Short Story Prize Winners THE best short stories of the year of 1921, according to the award of the O. Henry Memorial Committee, was The Heart of Little Shilkara, by Edison Marshall which appeared in Everybody s for January last (first prize of $500) and The Man Who Cursed the Lilies, by Charles Tenney Jackson, in Short Stories magazine of December 10th last (second prize of $250). These two prize winning stories head the list of sixteen tales which are published here under the title of O. Henry Memorial Award Prize Stories of 1921. This was the third year of the prize. In announcing the prizes. Dr. Blanche Colton Williams of Hunter College and Columbia University, Chairman of the O. Henry Memorial Committee, makes an interesting resume of the short stories published in American magazines during the year. Results in 1921 differ in a number of respects from those of 1919 and 1920. In the earlier half year. January excepted, every reader reported a low average of current fiction, so low as to excite apprehension lest the art of the short story was rapidly declining. The latter six months, however, marked a reaction, with a higher percentage of values in November and December. Explanation of the low level lies in the financial depression which forced a number of editors to buy fewer stories, to buy cheaply, or to search their vaults for remnants of purchases made in happier days. Improvement began with the return to better financial conditions. Two characteristics of stories published in 1921 reveal editorial policies that cannot but be harmful to the quality of this art. These earmarks are complementary and...
