Excerpt: . . . 8 Assessment of Subsurface Chlorinated Solvent Contamination Using Tree Cores at New Haven, Missouri, 1999 - 2003 DCE; however, core samples from negative control trees in a Assessment of Subsurface Contamination at remote national forest contained small ( few micrograms in the Front Street Site headspace per kilogram of wet core ) concentrations of a com-pound with a similar retention time to cis-DCE; therefore, con-centrations of cis-DCE less than 10 g-h kg are considered Through interviews with local residents and former unreliable. employees of the relevant facilities, the USEPA determined that Considerable variability ( 52 to 55 percent difference ) was PCE was used and probably disposed at the Front Street site present in replicate core samples collected from trees TW02 and during the 1950 s and 1960 s. However, specific information TW08 with the replicate sample being smaller. This variability regarding the quantities of PCE used and manner and location is probably caused by differences in sampling technique as the of disposal at the site was not known. Because the site is near a replicate cores were placed in vials that contained 5 mL of USACE-sponsored flood protection levee, stringent limitations organic-free water and were stored in an inverted position exist on the installation of subsurface borings and monitoring before analysis. The water was added to reduce the potential for wells to protect the stability of the levee foundation. In addition diffusive loss of VOCs through the septa of the vials. Rather to limitations on subsurface boring and drilling, the property than preventing VOC loss, the addition of water appeared to...
