LABOR BULLETIN OF THE COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS, VOL. 10: SEPTEMBER, 1906 (CLASSIC REPRINT) (PAPERBACK)

Forgotten Books, United States, 2016. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand . Excerpt from Labor Bulletin of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, Vol. 10: September, 1906 The industrial development of this country has been in the hands of business men who, through their superior executive ability, have forced the technical part of the industry to initiate processes of manufacture which would economize the cost of production. It has been the skill of the manager and inventor urged on by the executive boards of corporations rather than the mechanical skill of the American workmen which has made our industrial system the most efficient in the world to-day. The keenness of the American business man as shown in the application of the principle of the division of labor to the study of the cost of production is commanding the admiration of the world. Couple this executive ability of our captains of industry with the skill of the American workmen trained in trade schools and this country will continue to lead. It is time to take a very forward step in the educational world, a time to inaugurate a departure in our educational scheme - the establishment of trade schools which will keep pace with the growth of the industrial system and supply its needs. The school is more the product of the age than its creator. Various types of technical schools have been established after the need of them has long existed. The result of the delay is that present schools are often meeting the industrial needs as they existed at a time when these schools were first agitated. The technical courses in our manual training high schools illustrate the shop processes as they existed 20 years ago. They teach the principles of mechanics involved...
