Brad Hallock, the younger of two children, grew up in Central Oregon and graduated from Redmond Union High School in 1955. He had earned with two, 4-year, Navy scholarships. Both required he sign 4-year, no-marriage contracts. He later breached the contracts and married his high school sweetheart, Carol Sweet. After some college, Brad joined the United States Air Force and began a challenging, but totally rewarding, career. He was assigned to Yale University after basic training, then to an overseas, remote assignment. He returned surplus to the Air Force in his field and was assigned to an Air Transportation squadron. Then fortuitously, the Air Force implemented a new, Airman Education and Commissioning Program, just as Brad's enlistment was about to end. He was assigned to The University of Tennessee (UT) where he later made his fourth stripe (SSgt). Brad graduated in fifteen months with a Bachelor of Science degree. Brad's first assignment was to Hawaii, with two stops in Texas to get a commission and study about Air Force Transportation. After learning his trade in Hawaii, Brad qualified for higher education and was sent back to...
