Excerpt from Harvard Medical Alumni Bulletin, Vol. 13: October, 1938 Dr. Marshall N. Fulton as Assistant to the Dean of the Medical School, and that he has arranged to devote part of his time to carrying on important administrative services with regard to the alumni. This duty, I am sure, will be a pleasant one. Dr. Fulton will continue his teaching and his research and his care of patients, but I hope that he will serve as an important link between the school and its graduates. I shall speak rather briefly; rather more briefly than Dr; Thompson has threatened. What I shall have to say will be partly descriptive of the school as it is today, and partly introductory to the more important considerations of medical education that are to be presented by my three colleagues in the school.
