FBC LTD, 2018. Hardback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand .Excerpt from Vegetable Situation: August 1974; Tvs-193 Potential production of 14 fresh vegetable crops this summer could be 1 percent lower than last year. Summer acreage for harvest suggests less sweet corn, celery, and tomatoes. Slightly more lettuce and cabbage is possible. In addition to these crops, there will be substantially fewer melons from less acreage, but probably more onions. In marked contrast to 1973, commercial vegetable prices to growers this summer are expected to show only slight to moderate seasonal decline. This would make them close to, or slightly higher than a year earlier and would reverse the lower-than - a-year-ago situation of the past 6 months. Furthermore, the Commercial Vegetable Price Index this fall probably will be materially higher than last year when grower prices fell substantially between the third and fourth quarters. Moving into the 1974/ 75 marketing year, p recessed vegetable inventories, especially canned, were thin. Although relief on the supply side is in sight - overall processing acreage up 5 percent over a year ago - retail prices will be higher. Canned vegetable product prices will probably advance more rapidly than frozen items. The quantity of all frozen items (excluding frozen potato products) in cold storage as of July 1 was 34 percent higher than a year earlier, when supplies were unusually light. Cannery and freezers have been facing unusual pressures this season. Not only are raw product costs up - from a fourth to nearly double a year earlier - but high priced and restricted tinplate supplies have been reported, especially in the California tomato area. Other material costs and wage rates are up substantially as well. A bigger summer supply of potatoes is forecast. Summer potato prices...
