She caught a violent chill some days ago, from exposure to the wet weather lately prevalent in England, and expired after a short illness from acute pneumonia. I enclose your letter to her and have the honour to remain Yours faithfully, M. S. Durham. The wicked old lady chuckled a good deal as she fastened up this note and addressed it to J. Ludlow, Esquire, at the Villa Beau Rivage. It seemed to afford her immense satisfaction and the old head nodded and shook with internal glee as she struck the hand-bell on her writing-table sharply. Nothing but strong measures...
