Dr. William Draper Lewis, dean of the law school of the University of Pennsylvania, considers that Mr. Roosevelt s method should be a most effective instrument for carrying on genuine popular government. It has long been the practice to amend State Constitutions by popular vote. If the entire Constitution can be thus amended, it is not a very radical change to permit the people in the same way to decide whether a particular statute shall stand. We would not assume that the court was wrong in interpreting the Constitution. We would assume that it was right. But we would assume that the people have the right to say whether or not they wanted that particular enactment as part of their law. A similar view is advanced by main in our legislatures. The Outlook editorially. It is not in favor of the recall of judges but is in favor of the recall of judicial decisions. This is not a recall of judges, it says; it is an appeal from the judges. The people practically possess this power now to overcome the veto of the court. Mr. Roosevelt s plan simply provides a simpler and more expeditious method of exercising that power. All the European nations, says The Outlook, except. Great Britain, have written constitutions limiting the power of the legislatures; but the legislatures are the final judges as to these limits and therefore as to their powers. Governor Osborne, of Michigan, agrees exactly...
