

Passage from England: A Memoir

By Frank Zajackowski

Createspace. Paperback. Condition: New. This item is printed on demand. 378 pages. A lifetime of plans and dreams are packed into a container and shipped from Los Angeles to a Caribbean island; but for a writer and immigrant from post-WWII Europe, the past is hard to forget and even harder to leave behind. Passage From England is the emotional journey of a mans search for home that interweaves the adventures and tragedies of his childhood in Americas 50s and 60s with the experiences of early retirement in the U. S. Virgin Islands. The journey begins in 1956, crossing the Atlantic by ocean liner, arriving in New York Harbor, then traveling by train to the paper-thin suburbs of Tarzana, California. Peddling as fast as he can to keep up with the neighborhood kids and culture of Boomer America, the child struggles against his fathers alcoholism and growing violence, determined to find a way to belong in a world where the tanned, carefree girls from the affluent foothills seem just out of reach in the rock n roll moonlight of adolescence. Told from two points of view spanning five decades, the multiple journeys of the child and the adult enrich one another,...
