

In the Fullness of Time: One Woman's Story of Growth and Empowerment (Paperback)

By Katherine P Stillerman

Createspace Independent Publishing Platform, 2017. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book ***** Print on Demand *****. In this sequel to Hattie's Place, the year is 1913. Hattie Robinson is married to the widowed Charles Barton and has left her teaching position at Calhoun School to raise Charles's sons and manage the Barton estate. Now she must reconcile her role as mother and wife with her work for woman's suffrage, a cause that ignited her passion when attending the Woman's Suffrage Procession in Washington, on the eve of Woodrow Wilson's first inauguration. As a young bride, twenty-three years her husband's junior, Hattie struggles for acceptance in the community and Barton family. And then, Will Kendrick, her first love, appears, causing old feelings to resurface. When Julia Martin, the widow of Charles's best friend Percy, reaches out to Charles for legal advice in settling her husband's estate, Hattie discovers clues casting doubt on Charles's fidelity, and begins to question her marriage. As Hattie throws herself into her work to gain the vote for women, South Carolina's reactionary politicians Ben Tillman and Cotton Ed Smith thwart suffrage efforts in the...
