Not illustrated. 1834 Excerpt: .the site is still denoted by the name; when the present mansion was built, some very old and very strong foundations were taken up which indubitably belonged to the ancient building. The kitchens at this place were built by the celebrated Archbishop Bowet, who, says Dr. Whitaker, in consequence consumed at Otley some portion of the fourscore tons of claret, with a proportionate quantity of other elements of hospitality, (the doctor should have added debauchery,) which he is said to have annually expended. This bibacious prelate died 1423. Whether any of the Archbishops afterwards dispensed in this town the contents of their wine cellars and larders, does not appear; no doubt the hungry and thirsty inhabitants of Otley regretted their departure, and lamented that they were doomed to bear the trappings of archiepiscopal authority, while they were deprived of all participation in archiepiscopal luxury.
