The Fourth Industrial Revolution has begun, where power, energy, mechanical devices, and biological systems merge. The world is changing so quickly that businesses can no longer predict their futures based on past successes. Amid constant change and market upheavals, how can a business work toward sustainable growth? In an insightful five-volume series, Magnus Penker explores the potential pitfalls and enormous opportunities associated with developing innovative ideas in the new global marketplace. In this, the first volume, you'll learn to assess and measure business innovations with the help of InnoSurvey, an evidence-based innovation-measurement tool and database. Designed by Penker, InnoSurvey provides business analysis and advice to a global community of entrepreneurs based on in-depth research from over a thousand international companies. Discover how to develop your own innovation leadership and culture, initiate strategic innovations, and identify which elements of a project can transform a brilliant idea into a practical product or service. The world is changing in exciting ways, providing unprecedented opportunities for businesses to address humanity's needs and dreams. Your company may be poised on the brink of amazing innovation—learn how to step over the edge and land on your feet. This item ships from La Vergne, TN. Paperback.
