Excerpt from The Young Mans Chances in South and Central America: A Study of Opportunity It is a pleasure to comply with the request of the author that I should write a Foreword for The Young Mans Chances in South and Central America. Ever since I first became interested in Latin America as a result of being appointed one of the United States delegates to the Second Pan-American Conference held in Mexico City in 1901, I have been a firm believer in the future of our sister American Republics and a sincere admirer of their peoples and institutions. My first impressions have been confirmed in later experiences as United States Minister to the Argentine Republic, to Panama, and to Colombia, and now as the executive officer of the Pan-American Union. These personal references are made simply to convince the reader of this book that my opinion of it is not that of a superficial observer. After looking carefully through the proof sheets, I am frank to state that I have found the subject matter not only interesting and instructive but full of valuable information to all persons who are watching the development of Latin America.
