BookBaby, 2017. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book. By understanding how neurological processes can be influenced by the environment and interactions with others, we can then focus on helping all children survive and thrive. There is help for children and parents who feel traumatized by our society and culture and it starts with looking at the basics of skill development and acquisition necessary for appropriate behaviour. This book details how neurological systems get derailed and then offers suggestions on how to help change the thinking and emotions that trigger disordered thinking. It also details how behaviour change works and how you can apply these techniques to yourself and others.
