Brand New Book  Print on Demand .Benjamin Lee Center for Psychosocial Studies On March 29-April 1, 1979, the Center for Psychosocial Studies held a conference in Chicago on New Approaches to the Self in which all the authors in this volume participated. Over the years the Center has acted as a communications link and coordination point for interdisciplinary discussions and research. Several years ago, we discovered that there was a renewed interest among psychoanalysts, anthropologists, and developmental psychologists in the investigation of the self, and the reason for this groundswell of activity was the discovery of the importance of problems of meaning and interpretation in each discipline. Since investigators in each of these disciplines were relatively ignorant of developments in the other approaches, we felt that a conference would be a timely catalyst. Each of the authors gave a presentation at the conference, and it is a mark of the success of the interdisciplinary effort that almost all the papers were extensively revised in response to the discussions. The first three papers by Arnold Goldberg, Ernest Wolf, and Robert Levine all use Heinz Kohut's psychoanalytic self psychology as their starting point. Goldberg places the self within a broader framework of philosophical and psychoanalytic theories, finally locating it in the types of communicative relationships a person constructs in his interactions with others. Wolf's paper explicates the basic ideas and innovations of Kohut's self psychology. Softcover reprint of the original 1st ed. 1982.
