This volume of Meditations upon Death and Eternity is full of interest. The theme, which in the hand of an ordinary writer would become commonplace, if not tedious, is as fresh and suggestive when touched by Mr. Tenney's pen, as if no one had ever written upon it before. Our forefathers were in the habit of having in their scanty libraries books which presented these solemn subjects often in very distressing ways, but still with religious power, and undoubtedly to edification. In his preface, Mr. Tenney alludes especially to the famous Meditations on Death, by Drelincourt, which DeFoes ghost-story helped mightily into circulation. In the vein which the old authors worked, but with a more modern spirit, full of the sense of the solemnity of the end and the hereafter, but with a more wholesome sense of the uses to which this life may be put, the Silent House opens five chapters entitled Building in the Dust, Near Home, The Dark Days, Searching for Light, The Light. Mr. Tenney is an orthodox clergyman, and his book (as any true man must be) is colored by his doctrine; but not so that any Christian reader may not be edified and strengthened by it. His hope is well founded, that these pages may be of service as a hand-book to those who are constantly called to the bedside of the dying, to minister at the burial of the dead, or to remind the living of those events which will so soon come to every man. Their comforting lesson is well summed up in the closing sentence: Our Christian faith writes the word Life in the place of Death. --The Unitarian Review, Vol. 5...
