Sharp, in proposing The Health of the Firm and Increasing Success in all their Enterprises, remarked that the announcement just made of the result of the first year under the new scheme, magnificent and encouraging as it was, was not necessary to be made first in order to elicit an enthusiastic response to his toast. (applause) He expressed the great pleasure it was to have Mrs. Bushill with them that evening, thus linking them very directly with the Founder of the business, one never to be forgotten by those who had the privilege of knowing him. (hear, hear) He referred in brief to each member of the Firm in turn, pointing out how their individual and combined energies were not only in the direction of increased business, but equally to secure the permanent improvement of all in their employ, (applause) He felt sure that all present were now 14 Air. T. W. Bushill. getting greater pleasure in their daily work, without any such feeling as some workpeople have of being mere machines, oiled occasionally, to prevent friction, the master s only interest being to get as much out of them as possible. He thought it a very progressive Stationery business, (laughter) as year by year it had been his privilege to see the business grow, and this year they were starting with a larger staff than ever before, (applause) He concluded by thanking the Firm for their generous hospitality that night, and proposed...
