These wants, and the enjoyments which result from supplying them, differ, no doubt, both in degree and in dignity, according as they refer to the spiritual or animal part of our complex nature - though, in its happiest state, both are capable of being very harmoniously blended. Those that belong to the mind are the highest certainly, and the best - but their importance is not so early or so universally felt: - the pursuit of them forms scarcely any part of the occupation of rude nations; and, even in the most civilized, they are but little valued or understood by the great body of the people. To this class, besides the hopes of Religion...
