Excerpt: the unwearied attention of the latter to every wish and feeling of her husband, or the happiness which, notwithstanding his blindness, he seemed in consequence to enjoy. During the war, we are told, Madame Huber used to put her husband in possession of the movements of the armies by arranging squadrons of pins on a map, in such a manner as to represent the different bodies of troops. A method was also invented by which he was enabled to write; and his wife used to form plans of the towns they inhabited, in relief, for him to study by the touch. In short, so many ways did her affection find of gladdening his darkened existence, that he was wont to declare he should be miserable were he to cease to be blind. I should not know, said he, to what extent a person in my situation could be beloved; besides, to me my wife is always young, fresh, and pretty, which is no light matter. Memoire3 sur Josephine, torn. i. Chapter XIX. Account of James Brindleys Canals. James Brindley, the celebrated engineer, was entirely self-taught in even the rudiments of mechanical science, -- although, unfortunately, we are not in possession of any very minute details of the manner in which his powerful genius first found its way to the knowledge of those laws of nature of which it afterwards made so many admirable applications. He was born at Tunsted, in the parish of Wormhill, Derbyshire,...
