Forgotten Books, 2017. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand . Excerpt from Temperance: A Sermon Preached in Christ Church, Albany Street Some of the Christians of St. Paul s time were troubled in their conscience about the matter of food. One believeth that he may eat all things another, who is weak, eateth herbs, so he says in the early part of this 14th chapter, which deals with this matter of eating meat. If you turn to the I. Corinthians, and look at the 8th and loth chapters, you will find that there too St. Paul considers the question of eating certain meat. The questions among the Romans and Corin thians were not exactly the same, but in considering both of them St. Paul appealed to the same great principles. If we look at what St. Paul says in both these cases we shall see that the same great reasons weigh with him, we shall find tod in him the same earnestness, and the same fullness of dealing with the question, the same wish and power to estimate fairly all the different points in a controversy, to deal rightly with both sides, the...
