I know it seems bad at first view, but all horticulturists must remember that it takes time to mature fruit or flower; such creations are not like mechanics, the work of hands, and controlled by man at will, but must be controlled by the laws of nature while guided by the hand of num. So let us cut away as soon as the flower opens, if we can, but any way as soon as the fruit sets, and so deliver the tree of its over-burden, and save to ourselves a fair crop of fine fruit. Now is my time too, I think, to sow my plaster, and I shall take my early morning time, when the dew is heavv, and sow from...
