Excerpt from A Brief Statement of That Which Glasgow Was, Is, and Shall Be in Mind and Manner Great Britain, or Scotland, is the last in conquest, but first in promise. Great Britain is early brought into historical notice, and has retained it. Julius Caesar first began its conquest in the year 55 b.c., and successors without number followed in the train, till Agricola in person, from 78 to 83 a.c., and after him Lollius Urbicus, in the reign of Antonius Pius, 139 a.c., subjected the entire country under the Roman power. To secure their conquest, each contrived to build a wall of defence 36 miles and 630 yards long, with a depth and breadth to secure its strength and endurance. Many parts to this day retain its tale of wonder, and some stones are within the University as mementoes of the past. The wall was, first, a work of defence against the native power beyond it, and, second, to us a lesson to teach us our ancestry and their tactics. Skill and science, with their conclusions, were each carried out to perfection, proving that the original of man was the same as seen around and in us now.
