

Realities of a Stroke: The Good, the Bad, and the Truth (Paperback)

By Cleothus Bell

Bellcle Publishing, United States, 2011. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand . Cleothus Bell is a three-time stroke survivor. He had his first stroke on June 6, 2002 at the age fifty-two. His second stroke was on December 2, 2002, and his third stroke was on February 16, 2009. Nine years before his first stroke, he was employed as a demolition inspector for the city of East St. Louis, Illinois. He remained in this position for three years before he received a promotion to demolition director. After working as a demolition director, he transferred to Saint Clair County and worked as a demolition coordinator until his second stroke occurred. This is the story of a three time stroke survivor. A man faced with enormous challenges after losing the use of both arms and both legs from a stroke. And after four weeks of inpatient rehabilitation was released from therapy with little hope for improvement. With a body so weak and so easily fatigued his efforts during three additional months of outpatient rehabilitation produced only minimal results. Determined to prove the experts wrong, he devoted every second of every day working to minimizing his...
