Living in close proximity to the city of Boston, Christopher Reardon is fortunate enough to have access to some of the best hospitals in the world. Due to complications with his brain tumor, by age 10 he is in a wheelchair, but persists on to graduate from middle school, high school, and college. His education and his personal turmoil have all culminated in his memoir. The book takes a look at the dark moments of this life as well as the positive ones, and depicts the genesis of an internal strength within Chris. Nothing is black and white-the book explores this idea by showing opposing ideas and situations. Spawning Gray culminates on the story Luck, and having read the account of Chris life, readers must decide what luck means to them. Influenced by French philosopher Jacques Derrida and his breaking down of binary oppositions (goodbad, happyunhappy, darklight, etc. ) C. R. Reardon tries to bring more of a literary touch to the genre of autobiography and memoir....
